

This is a block-container with an explicit block-progression-dimension of 20mm and an overflow value of "repeat". The contents of the block are too large to fit within a single instance of the block, so the renderer should create two or more blocks in order to render all of the content.

If the absolute-position trait is "auto", it generates additional viewport/reference pairs in the case where the reference-area would otherwise be larger than its viewport-area parent and the overflow trait is "repeat".